YEY	Yes,	there are many things that are "investigated" here at "MIB", some are Extreme top Secret and can only get viewed from having clearance.
•	Corr	ect, big huge "AREA 50" removed from public view along with SWAT, but glad you got a glimpse!
		it's always fun to play cowboy as well! Yee HA!

one of us	posted 02 February 2011 23:24 There is an MIB extension "Area 458" in Kentucky.	Hide Post
	We are loading some AA-2520 and comparing it to RL-15 and Varget Extreme in the .458 B&M as soon as I can get out of the hangar and onto the flight line to send some 450-grainers on a sortie. My wife was with me when I went looking for "black labs" locally in uniform and scubs shops. Much snickering was heard, when inquiring of the clerk I had to resort to a google and internet order from the Ackley company in Missouri. Ironic, the name, eh? P.O. Ackley probably never wore a black lab	s.
	Showed my wife the picture of Michael at the loading bench, rear quartering side view of head, wearing black lab, and she said, "Is that you?" Gray-goateed-bespectacled reloaders in black all look the same to the casual observer	D COBL
	So I quickly scrolled down to SWAT and Cowboy Doc M, and she cracked up, knew it was not me. I do like those black labs.
	Will have to get some for the MIB extension campus: "Doc B, MIB-KY" Lacking a PhD, I could serve as medical consultant to MIB, just in case anyone needs translation/interpretation of ALF's medicalese.

	IBT Well, while I am not sure about the wasting your time part of your assessment, I do tend to agree with you that they are going to go ahead w discontinuing the line once the FN are sold out. As I understand they had about a years supply of FN made up in the various calibers. Makes se they concede to us that they will remain available from the "Factory Website" but not in the distributors such as Midway. I think once the remai sold out, end of the FN. They also would believe that once the flack settles down in a few months and we see that we can get them off the wel things will get quite on the subject, we will forget about it, and then we will be stuck with the Round nose and that will be that. I think they are to commit to doing both RN and FN-it's either or-and I think you are right. Until I see them come out with a statement I contend this is where t going in the end. If we keep North Fork and CEB in business, I can do without them myself. I am still pissed with them for even considering such	nse to me, ining stock is bsite then e not going :hey are Michael, been following your post since page one and agree with your findings. However, I must correct you on your new lab attire. When using or clones, your cap must be sideways and the pistols also held sideways. Secondly, when wearing your western attire, the lab coat then becom "duster".

	Man, on the 1911s sideways I never really figured that out! Is that something like throwing a curve ball? Maybe throwing bullets around the co something? I don't know! Now the Cowboy Lab Dusteryeah I can get that! I was thinking the same thing myself! I used to have one of thosesomewhere? I just finished up basic data with the 458 Super Short this weekon bullets I have been working with anyway. I loaded it to the website in pdf, download it when you get a chance I was pleased with it, I discovered LilGun recently, and the 458SS likes it. LilGun and WW 296 are tops. Short story, 300 TSX at 2420 fps, MY FA North Fork at 2310 fps, 350 Speer at 2150 fps, and 400 Woodleigh at 1965 fps. Just can't bust 2000 with that 400 yet, it's getting close on pre could use it a bit I think getting closer to 65000 and bust 2000. But I am yery pleased with bar 235 North Fork ad 2010 North North Pork at 2310 fps.	, go NVORITE-325 ssures, I could push it a bit I think getting closer to 65000 and bust 2000. But I am very pleased with the 325 North Fork and such! Not bad for a little tir 6 lbs.	ny gun that is

	Sam You are correct. On 2 I got near perfect shearing, star pattern. On two others 4 blades came off,2 hung on a bit and sheared into 1 bigger petal the way to 10 inches close to center. I would say that is what is causing the instability at the end of penetration. They are going straight until rig end.

ichael458 he of Us	posted 06 February 2011 02:10 And on the 280 CEB BBW #13 I used a standard load I had been using with some of the 286s, and pressures were lower with the 280 #13 than other 286s, barnes, TSX, Hornady and equal to the North Fork. Lower pressures from 4000-5000 PSI and giving higher velocity, not by much abo No down side on that either. M

	come up with a ballpark estimate. And if you can do so with a rather simple, easy-to-use formula, so much the better!) Anyway, here were my predictions: quote: Cartridge name: ? 9.3 B&M/280 CEB BBW #13 Solid Predicted penetration in Michael's medium: g9 to 83 ins. 92 max. As you can see, I missed the mark there by at least 7-9 percent. quote: Cartridge name: ? 9.3 B&M/255 CEB BBW #13 NonCon HP Predicted penetration in Michael's medium: 30 to 36 ins. 40 max. Might this bullet have penetrated to the predicted 30-36 inches if it had more stability? We could only guess. Great work as usual, Michael!
